

Abstracts of the Disclosure

In a multi-processor system, each processor transmits a system time synchronous signal to another processor using hardware, and measures the propagation delay time of the signal. Then, the timer value of each processor is adjusted with the measured propagation delay time.